

Cannabis Law 2030: Impact of Federal Regulations on NY's Legalization of Cannabis – New York Law Journal

July 08, 2024

Cannabis Law 2030: The Potential Impact of Federal Regulation on New York's Legalization of Cannabis | New York Law Journal

As readers of the Carter Ledyard column in the New York Law Journal already know, we have written quite extensively about the growing pains New York has experienced in rolling out its adult-use cannabis program. The process is still unfolding, and the Office of Cannabis Management (OCM) has come under quite a bit of criticism this year from the Governor, ultimately resulting in the departure of its inaugural director, Chris Alexander. While it appears that New York is currently re-assessing its approach to the roll-out, while simultaneously balancing the interests of multiple (sometimes competing) stakeholders in the ecosystem, it is also important to take a step back and look at movement on the national level, and how it might impact New York in the years to come.

Read more about this development in our article behind a paywall Cannabis Law 2030: The Potential Impact of Federal Regulation on New York's Legalization of Cannabis | New York Law Journal or contact Alex Malyshev at malyshev@clm.com or Sarah Ganley at ganley@clm.com for details.

related professionals

Alexander G. Malyshev / Partner

D 212-238-8618

malyshev@clm.com

Sarah H. Ganley / Associate

D 212-238-8834

ganley@clm.com

---