I find it gratifying to navigate overseas companies through the often byzantine U.S. legal landscape and help them solve problems or seize opportunities. Clients tell me I'm very patient, accessible, and ready to answer their questions at all hours. They appreciate that I am vigilant about communicating clearly and keeping them updated on any significant developments I have a strong appreciation and understanding of my client's cultural perspectives and how these influence their business decisions.

Counseling his global client base on a full spectrum of corporate and commercial legal and business matters, John Driscoll advises domestic and international entities in U.S. investments and business practices. With a special emphasis on Turkey cross-border work, John helps some of that country's largest companies understand and function in the complex American legal system.

Experience

- Represented an iconic chocolate company in the sale of 34 retail locations across the U.S to a Swiss retailer.
- Provided US legal advice in connection with the largest consortium loan ever made in Turkey.
- Represented Turkish digital services company in the acquisition of a U.S. technology platform.
- Advised Turkish, Belgian and US investors in the recapitalization of a U.S. holding company.

- Advised a Turkish holding company in the acquisition of a candy and confectionery business from a U. S. private equity fund.
- Provide ongoing and on-call advice to operating companies in the food and candy industries in the areas of corporate, intellectual property and employment law.
- Advised high net worth foreign investors on the acquisition of commercial and residential real estate in the U.S.
