As an associate in Carter Ledyard's Litigation and Dispute Resolution practice and member of the Firm's Hemp & CBD and Cybersecurity and Data Privacy groups, I represent a broad array of clients hailing from a variety of jurisdictions and industries, each with their own distinct set of concerns and goals. I take a collaborative and tailored approach to representing and advising my clients, always focusing on each client's specific needs, risks, and goals.

Representing U.S.-based and international clients in both state and federal courts, litigator Sarah Ganley advises clients in a variety of complex litigation matters, including general commercial disputes, securities and civil RICO litigation, trusts and estates litigation, website accessibility litigation, and intellectual property litigation, among others. She also has experience representing clients in U.S.-based and international arbitrations. As an experienced litigator familiar with all stages of civil litigation and dispute proceedings, Sarah contributes her broad expertise and creative problem-solving skills to a team of seasoned litigators and advisors who work tirelessly to advance their clients' goals.

Outside of litigation, Sarah advises clients in data security and privacy matters, helping them develop, strengthen, test, and enforce their information protection policies and procedures. She guides them through the ever-changing regulatory body including the EU's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and consults on the myriad state regulations and how such regulations may impact her clients' goals and needs. Sarah is also a member of the Firm's Cannabis, Hemp & CBD Industry Group and co-authors a regular column on cannabis law with Carter Ledyard partner and Co-Chair of the Cannabis, Hemp & CBD Industry Group, Alexander G. Malyshev.
